

Report on the State of Tolerance in the Arab World
19/7/2010

The Ramallah Center for Human Rights Studies (RCHRS) published a report on the state of tolerance in the Arab World for the year 2009. This report is part of a RCHRS project which aims at disseminating a culture and values of tolerance in the Arab World. This project is operated by the Arab Network for Tolerance, which was established and is coordinated by RCHRS and composed of members from most of the Arab countries.

This is the second report published by RCHRS which attempts to monitor and evaluate the state of tolerance in a number of Arab countries. RCHRS observes the state of tolerance by using its developed measurements while taking each country's situation's specificities into consideration, such as its level of social and economic development.

The report examines the state of tolerance in Egypt, Tunisia, Morocco, Lebanon and Palestine.
