

RCHRS publishes the 26th issue of Tasamuh

Ramallah Center for Human Rights Studies published the 26th issue of its Tasamuh journal, a periodical that is dedicated to discussing tolerance and human rights issues.

This issue included a number of articles that discussed and analyzed the current Palestinian situation.

The articles section included a group of narratives on the Palestinian state in general. Dr. Khalid Hroub participated in an article entitled "Occupied Palestine Between the Mosque and the Police Station". Peter Schaefer the head of the Rosa Luxemburg Foundation (Palestine Office) participated in an article entitled "Jeep or Independence: About Palestinian Indecisiveness Regarding International Aid". Other articles discussed the relationship between the Palestinians and the West.

The reports section included three selections. First part was on the last Lebanese Parliament elections, the second was on the city of Jerusalem and the European political mind, and finally on how the Palestinian factions dealt with Europe's stand regarding the Palestinian Question.
